

Overseas teaching adventure

“Become more than the average tourist.”

Looking for a break from the hard grind of study but not sure which direction to take? Or do you dream of packing your bags and heading overseas but don't have the cash to experience it all?

Imagine a new lifestyle where travel and adventure is just around the corner. You could take weekend trips to watch the sun rise along the Great Wall of China, enjoy bowls of noodle soup in hole-in-the-wall restaurants in Vietnam or dive into the crystal clear Aegean Sea off the coast of Turkey.

If these experiences sound appealing, then teaching English overseas could be the change you have been seeking. Join the thousands of other Australians around the world who are having the time of their lives teaching English as a second language and getting paid to travel and experience another culture.

Teach International, a Registered Training Provider, is one of Australia's leading providers of TESOL training. A short Certificate-level course in TESOL (Teaching English to Speakers of Other Languages) will give you the internationally recognised qualification you need to secure great employment overseas, guaranteed.

Teach International

general manager Adam Morehouse says teaching English overseas allows people to become more than the average tourist and really experience the culture of the country.

“There are literally thousands of exciting, well-paid overseas teaching positions available immediately for people of all ages and backgrounds, with or without university degrees. The only requirements are fluency in English, a TESOL qualification and a sense of adventure.”

To help you find out more about the world of TESOL,

Teach International has produced an interactive DVD, designed to give you a sample of the wonderful experiences and adventures you can have teaching English overseas. It is full of graduate interviews, information on teaching destinations and overseas footage from graduates living and working around the world.

“The idea of gaining a unique cultural experience and taking a break from university study is what attracts many students to do the course and to take up the teaching option,” Morehouse says.

“There are thousands of jobs around the world – from Turkey to Thailand, Mexico to Morocco, Czech Republic to China and Borneo to Bulgaria, the world really is your oyster when you have a TESOL certificate!”

Teach International is running a free information session on Monday April 6 at Level 12, 474 Flinders Street, Melbourne at 6.15-7.15pm.
