

Part-time work

Working in the hospitality industry is an ideal way to generate income while you study. Food safety and RSA training is an ideal package of qualifications to enable you to work in hotels, cafes, restaurants, clubs and any other hospitality business in your local area. These courses are short and inexpensive and give you a nationally-recognised qualification at the end of the training. Training can be done face-to-face, online or by distance learning – whatever suits you best. Career starts

Learning and education does not have to mean endless lectures and hours sitting in a classroom. It can be industry-based training, small class sizes and experienced trainers teaching you the tricks of the trade in your chosen career. Carrick offers training at all levels – Certificates I to IV, Diploma and Advanced Diploma, as well as bachelor programs, in many areas including accounting, business, dental technology, hospitality and many more.

Carrick has training facilities in four states across Australia and a 23 year history. Carrick's Open Day is Sunday August 8. Bookings: 1300 364 363

Design academy

If you are interested in a career in advertising, fashion design, graphic design, photo-media or visual arts, why not visit the Australian Academy of Design's Open Day on Sunday August 8 between 11am-4pm. The Academy has a reputation for producing high quality, industry-ready creative art and design professionals. Class sizes at the Academy are kept small which means more individual attention from tutors. FEE-HELP is also available which means tuition payments can be deferred. So if you want to expand your creative horizons and be proactive about your choice of a design degree, visit the Academy.
